Acknowledgements

The workshop organizers wish to thank the many people who offered their, time, energy, and perspectives in pulling together this workshop over these last nine months. Specifically, we wish to acknowledge our Chairman, Mel Sheldon, Our Vice Chair, Glen Gobin, and our Secretary, Marie Zackuse and all Board members for their support and participation in the workshop; and our hosts at the Hibulb Cultural Center and Natural History Preserve, especially Hank Gobin, Director, and Inez Bill, Re-Discovery Curator, for their time, support and guidance from the beginning. We also thank Melissa Parr, Senior Curator, for her help in smoothing the way for this large event to take place in the new museum, and Veronica Leahy for her beautiful table centerpieces.

We are very grateful to Ed Johnstone and G.I. James who freed up time from their very busy schedules to be here and serve as witnesses to this event.

We also wish to thank all presenters who took the time to prepare and share their work, and in some cases, travel from quite a distance! We especially thank NWIFC Chairman, Billy Frank, who juggles so many requests, for overseeing our Talking Circle, and Georgiana Kautz who kindly accepted our offer to guide our closing session.

We thank all the facilitators and moderators who accepted our invitation to help guide and engage in the presentations, including: Chairman Brian Cladoosby, Chairman Shawn Yanity, Ray Fryberg, Hank Gobin, Charlene Krise, Daryl Williams, Roylene Rides-At-The-Door, Pat Stevenson, and James Zorn. We also are most grateful to Lummi elder Chief Bill James, who traveled to Tulalip, and with Geraldine Bill, Tulalip elder and Hank Gobin, Tulalip elder, shared their thoughts and stories about the cultural importance of plants to Northwest Tribes.

We also want to acknowledge those who traveled from afar to join us: Our First Nations visitors from the Squamish Nation, Chief Bill Williams and Chief Ian Campbell of the Coast Salish Gathering and Squamish First Nation, and James Zorn, Executive Administrator for the Great Lakes Indian Fish and Wildlife Commission.

We sincerely thank the federal and state land managing agency leaders and their staff for coming to listen, present, and to engage in a dialogue with western Washington treaty tribes on this important and timely issue, especially Kent Connaughton, Fred York and Peter Goldmark.

We wish to thank the workshop Steering Committee, comprised of 22 individuals representing eight different tribes, 4 different agencies, and several universities and non-profits. They are: Warren Kinggeorge, Hank Gobin,

Inez Bill, Jason Gobin, Russell Moses, Joyce LeCompte-Mastenbrook, Fred York, Robin Leshner, Betty Swanaset, Katie Krueger, Laura Potash Martin, Jan Hollenbeck, Jacilee Wray, Julia Bennett-Gladstone, Phyllis Reed, Jeffrey Thomas, Elise Krohn, Valerie Segrest, Susan Given-Seymour, Jim Freed, Rodney Cawston, and Dave Kendrick.

We wish too to acknowledge Jessica Gigot and Rose James for willingly taking on the organization and facilitation of the Tribal student and youth leaders' session. We thank the students and youth who stepped up to take on a substantive role in this workshop, including: Cecilia Gobin, James Decoteau, Shelia McCoy, Charlie Cortez, Valerie Segrest, and Andrea Johnston. We also thank those who were willing to serve as co-facilitators for the youth session.

We also wish to thank Tulalip's Natural Resources Department staff, who all have chipped in to help—whether it be collecting greens and berries, delivering wood, donating elk, filleting salmon and shucking shellfish or making suggestions for the program. We are grateful to you all! In particular, we are grateful to Ray Fryberg and Terry Williams who helped shape the development of the workshop, Dave Wilbur and Helene Contraro who provided endless administrative support, Jason Gobin who designed the workshop logo and gave much time to preparation for this event, Russell Moses who provided needed guidance along the way, and Rebecca Hunter, Judi Patrick and Cynie Hatch who served as conference registrars.

We wish to thank too, Michelle Balagot of Tulalip's Language Department and staff and helpers, for making and donating many cedar roses for this event!

We thank Tulalip Data Services for providing us with an audiovisual whiz, Merle Blevins, during our workshop, and for assisting with the development of workshop materials. We are grateful to our Communications Department, specifically Niki Cleary and Eero Johnson, for their help in documenting the highlights of the workshop, and to George White and Francesca Hillery, in our Public Affairs Office.

We are very grateful to all those who volunteered for this event, including Tulalip and non-Tulalip agency staff, Darla Boyer, Allison Warner, Josh Meidav, Robin Leshner, Linda Storm, Julia Gold, Joyce LeCompte-Mastenbrook, Matt Pouley and Jan Hollenbeck. We especially wish to acknowledge Patti Gobin, Veronica Leahy, and Cathy Stanley, Russell Moses, and Ross Fenton who provided much needed assistance during the hectic final pre-conference days!

We are especially thankful to our dinner hosts, menu planners, and cooks: Inez Bill, Donald Jones, Ethyl Jones, Nellie Knapp-Mills, Tiffany Stewart, and Jimmy Pablo for preparing delicious foods and feeding us all.

We are very grateful to Jamie Stroble, contractor to Tulalip, for her superb organizational and editing skills as the conference registrar, and the many other hats she wore adeptly while assisting in the coordination of this event – from budget tracker to berry picker!

Finally, we would like to thank the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Region 10, for their support of this workshop through grant funding, and to the Tulalip Tribes, and the Stillaguamish Tribe for providing supplemental funding for this workshop.
